End of a Manhunt

"They'll never take me alive," Homer Robbins, escaped maniac, boasted—and he was right! This is his body which state troopers are carrying from a patch of Millbury brushland where the homicidal fugitive was killed after he had put up a desperate gun battle, wounding one officer and temporarily standing off more than 60. Asked to surrender, he refused.

Slain Sniper Wrote Notes of Defiance

By ARTHUR J. QUINN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Boston, June 9.—Covering in the woods without food for three days, Homer Robbins, escaped maniac, scribbled a "declaration of war" against the state police who finally found and killed him. Monday Evening, Frederick H. Baker revealed today.

Notes written by the madman were found in his pockets by Dr. Baker after Robbins had been slain early this morning in Millbury in a desperate gun battle, in which he wounded one policeman.

While Dr. Baker was performing the autopsy, he found a scrap of paper, the notes read:

"The armistice is over.
"The fight must go on.
"Homer Robbins must not be taken.
"The state police aren't big enough to take me.
"I want to go home but they won't let me.
"I'll get home. I'll fight them.
"I won't be taken alive."
"The medical examiner said the Hyattsville, Md. State Hospital inmate had not eaten since Sunday noon, when he dashed away from his home, after firing on a state policeman.

JEAN HUNT MAJ. HODGE, THE WILDS OF NEVADA

50,000 PLE BY 'OUTLAW' STRIKE

BULLETIN
Washington, June 9 (AP).—Senator Copeland (D., N. Y.) called today for a general federal labor investigation, covering not only the strike-troubled steel industry but other major industries as well.

Saginaw, Mich., June 9.—Michigan's outlaw power strike—unauthorized by union leaders, condemned by Governor Frank Murphy—nearly ended this afternoon with authorities planning to end the industrial paralysis by force or by persuasion.

The strike was called at 2 a. m. by union workers of the Consumers Power Company because, they said, they were dissatisfied with slow progress in negotiations of their demands for higher wages and union recognition.

Since the power company serves the entire Saginaw Valley, which has 500,000 people in its 187 villages and towns, industrial somnolence began spreading through the entire territory. Upwards of 100,000 men were expected to be out of work by tonight unless the strike is quickly ended.

HITS 45,000 HOMES
Most of the 45,000 homes served by consumers also were without light and power.

While the effects of the strike in Saginaw and Bay City were slow to be felt, it had the same effect as a "general strike" in Flint at lack of power forced shutdown of many big factories, throwing more than 50,000 out of work and slowing a large radio station.

Housewives also found their electric appliances such as awnings and washing machines would not work, and elevators in downtown buildings in Flint, including one 16-story structure, stopped.

While this was happening, union leaders in Washington reported they had reached a tentative agreement with the power company over the workers' demands, and were flying back here by plane to call off the strike.

The leaders, officials of the United Automobile Workers Union, who had organized the power workers, stated emphatically the strike was not authorized.

"STALLING" CHARGED
In striking the union workers had accused the company of "stalling" in their negotiations. But even while they walked out, the settlement was reached.

Jean Lovable Girl, Ann Reveals in Life Story

In this second installment of "The Tragic Life Story of Jean Harlow" Ann Marsters reveals that in her own private life the screen star was a simple, unaffected and lovable girl. Miss Marsters, who wrote the last interview with the famous star before the actress' tragic death last Monday, got much of her material for this serial story of a glamorous life from Miss Harlow herself, and from her friends. One of the last things Jean Harlow said to Miss Marsters was: "I intend to snatch at whatever opportunities for happiness come my way." Fate intervened, as it had several times before.

Jean Harlow was a strange girl—strange in that she was so unlike the public's conception of her.

To her fans, she was an irresistible siren who symbolized the very essence of Hollywood glamour and allure. To her friends, she was a simple, unaffected girl who seldom went to parties, but who sometimes invited them to her home, where her charming mother would cook spaghetti for them, and join in the informal gaiety.

She was completely without artifice; she had no pose, no contrived mannerisms, no artificial country's idea of her. It was just a year ago this week that I first met her. She was making the picture "Thuy" and I was just a year ago this week that I first met her. She was making the picture "Thuy" and I was just a year ago this week that I first met her.

'LOST' FINAL WORD FROM BOSTON MEN

Skimming low over the salt desert near Elko, Nevada, army planes sought two Massachusetts fliers today, hoping that their last plane had made a forced landing instead of cracking up—as was feared.

Missing since 12:45 yesterday afternoon are Major Clarence S. Hodge, state supervisor of aviation and commander of the 26th Division Observation Squadron, National Guard, and Lieutenant Joseph L. McNell, the major's observer.

The final message from the two fliers flashed through to the Elko Airport one hour and 15 minutes before the ship was due at Salt Lake City.

"Flying at 14,000 feet—can't make out position—lost," it said.

ON HOP TO BOVVOY
With Major Hodge piloting the missing single-engine Douglas observation plane was making the cross-country hop to its home port of Boston after training maneuvers in March Field, California.

The flight was being made by easy stages and the ship had taken off from Reno only three hours before the call for help was sounded. Army officials believed that the machine was in good condition and had plenty of fuel at its last takeoff.

But a violent thunder and lightning storm had hit the vast desert area over which Major Hodge and Lieutenant McNell were flying just about the time they made their last report.

It was within a hundred miles of

Blanche Oelrichs Jilts Socialite, Elopes to Elkon

Boston and Newport society friends of beautiful Blanche Oelrichs learned with amazement today that she had thrown over the socially desirable Howard C. Leavens of Philadelphia and eloped with a New York communion merchant.

Blanche is the daughter of Mrs. Moreland Oelrichs of this city, Newport and Jamestown, R. I., and Harry E. Oelrichs of Los Angeles, California, she is of society and Louis Stoddard isn't in any Social Register.

MOTHER VERIFIES NEWS
The marriage, which was revealed in New York, followed an elopement a month ago, and even the bride's mother didn't know of it, by telephone from Jamestown, the Boston Evening American, Mrs. Oelrichs said.

"It is all a surprise to me. I

Jean Harlow Told Ann Marsters of Quest for Joy

Her Life Never Happy

new her three weeks ago on the "Starlog" set.

In that first interview, she talked of herself and said:

"I suppose a lot of people would be disappointed in me. But I don't think any Hollywood actress could possibly live up to the idea that the world has of her."

"If she tried to, she'd be a foolish, artificial kind of existence."

"I mean," she had continued, "in that casual time she had to her voice, 'that there are a million people who don't know you and don't know anything about you, except a few superficial things, yet they have all formed very definite ideas about what you are like, what you think, and the sort of life you lead.'"

"I sometimes think that the fans are a little unfair to me. I don't think they WANT to be natural, normal human beings."

When she spoke of the future, she had said merely this:

"I have a seven-year contract with M. G. M., so as far as my work is concerned, the future should take care of itself. As for my personal life—I intend to snatch at whatever opportunities for happiness come my way."

Had she lived, Jean's quest for happiness might have been answered by William Powell. She had postponed their marriage, because she wanted them both to be absolutely sure. She wanted to take no chances of her fourth marriage ending unhappily.

Her marriage with Powell had to be put off, and only a few weeks before her death they had quarreled. But it was a quarrel which only brought them closer together, after the misunderstanding had been expunged out.

Pampered Child

Bill Powell is a very different type of man from the three men whom Jean loved and married. And there was no similarity either between the three husbands.

Charles McGraw, the Chicago boy whom she married when she was 16, was a very pleasant-looking fellow.

Neither Jean's family, nor Charles' family, approved of the wedding, but as a child, Jean was used to having everything she wanted.

And if she had been capable of being spoiled, she would probably have grown up into a supercilious little tyrant.

Her grandparents, in particular, did all they could to spoil and pamper her.

She was born in their big stone house in Kansas City, and continued to live there during her childhood. As she grew older, and was able to toddle about, everyone in the household started to her slightest whim. She had only to bang her spoon against her high chair, and grandma and grandpa would go into a flurry of concern.

In later years she often spoke of her grandparents, and she pointed her grandfather as a tall, dimpled man, with deep eyes and kind eyes—who could see her only once in her life.

That was when she was grown up, and in Hollywood. The mother first had to come over long distance telephone, after he had seen her in her apartment only in flimsy black nightgown.

Then there was her grandmother, Ellen Williams Harlow—a sweet, graceful woman who sang, painted and wrote poetry.

"My grandparents," Jean said, "were the most loving grandparents that ever lived. And they gave me far more attention than any child deserves."

Mother Her Idol

"Even during the day, when grandfather should have been in his office, he would sneak home to play with me—and he would give my mother and grandmother the most abused excuses for playing hooky from his business."

Jean's father was a physician who went to his office every morning and for whom she watched at the window in the evening.

But the most vivid memory of her childhood was her mother—her golden-haired, blue-eyed mother from whom Jean inherited her beauty. Her mother was her real playmate—and when she grew older and became a popular actress, that relationship remained just as close.

Through all her mother's love and sympathy marriage Jean Harlow's love life was undisturbed. By the time she had her mother.

When Jean was two years old, her parents moved to a home not far from the Harlow homestead. It overlooked Kansas City's most beautiful park—in which Jean spent most of her playtime, until she entered school.

Her school days began at Miss Harlow's school for girls—to which her mother would take her and bring her home every day.

Jean used to say with a tinge of pride in her voice, "Mother never had a luncheon date that I can remember. We always had our meals together."

When Jean was ten, the first important change came into her life. Her mother and father separated, and she went, with her mother, to California where they lived for three years.

But at last, home-sickness drove them back to Kansas City to live near Jean's grandparents.

(In tomorrow's installment of Jean Harlow's life story, Miss Marsters tells of Jean's schooldays and of the beginning and result of her first romance.)

Hollywood will always remember this Jean Harlow—lovely, vital, fond of simple pleasures. Much to bathing suits like the pictured one might become her, Jean seldom put on a swimming costume except for a swim. The pool at her Beverly Hills home was in constant use. The exercise which kept her figure perfect was no hardship to Jean. She was a languorous type only on the screen. In real life, she was vigorous, athletic, wholesome.

companion, Jeanette MacDonald, in sad but rich voice saying her farewell in Jean Harlow's favorite song, "Tillie's Love Call."

Soon the 260 intimate friends had passed through the gate.

That was all the police permitted. These were Lionel Barrymore, Wallace Berry, Billie Burke, Virginia Bruce, Joan Crawford, Ronald Colman, Sam Graham, Myrna Loy, Lila Mearns, Eugene Pallette, Chester Morris, Margaret O'Sullivan, Mae Robinson, Charles Rogers, Ronald Russell, Norma Shearer, Robert Young, Spencer Tracy, Joan Bennett, Ray Francis, Robert Benchley, Madge Evans, Elissa Landi, John May Oliver, Lettie Stine and others.

Brief was the Christian Science service read by Mrs. Genevieve Smith, for seven years confidante of the actress.

The pallbearers escorting the casket to the mausoleum were those with whom Miss Harlow had lived: Ned Cragg, Gable, Edward J. Mann, M.G.M. executive, Hunt Stromberg, producer, Jack Conway and W. S. Van Dyke, director, and Kay Johnson, cameraman.

Here was a life of anomalies, in big things and little. She played hard-boiled strong-willed her mother called her "baby." A figure of persistent domestic tragedy with three marriages ended in two divorces and a suicide, she was rated internally as a "good woman" without qualification based on marital mores.

EX-HUSBANDS THERE

She called herself Hollywood's worst actress and had few rivals as the box office. Regularly worth a million dollars, she drove her own automobile and answered her own telephone.

The dramatic situations in which she was involved extended even into the mortuary chapel, where efforts were made to keep funeral services as quiet as her publicized manner and varied contacts would permit.

The restricted group of mourners included the star's mother and her three former husbands, one of them Miss Harlow's last, her mother's hands, and a bereaved sweetheart of the actress herself.

Interred there, centered on William Powell, screen actor who made public declaration of his love just after Miss Harlow's death.

"Why did this have to be?" loved her? I loved her?"

FATHER ATTENDS SERVICE

Among the mourners were Charles McGraw, III, wealthy upstate who married her when she was only 16; Hal Rosson, her third husband from whom she was divorced in 1934; her father, Dr. Bern, film producer, whose death a few months after their wedding is still somewhat mysterious, with Maxine Bell, who came to his ex-wife's aid in her sorrow.

Her second husband was Paul Bern, film producer, whose death after the last tribute from relatives, the body was placed in the "Sanctuary of Benediction," the mausoleum where lie many of the stars of the film—Will Rogers, Marie Dressler, Lon Chaney, Florence Zerkow, William Red, Ernest Torrence, Jack and Lettie Pickford, Lowell Sherman, Earle Williams and others.

At the request of Mrs. Bern, who sought to avoid mob scenes which have attended funerals of some screen stars, the body did not lie in state. The mother ordered the casket kept closed, wishing her daughter's public to remember her as she was in life.

Although Jean had one of Hollywood's largest collections of jewels, to gem adornment had died, her body was dressed in a light beauteous silk, argente gown. In the casket she rested on velvet, the color of her shining honey gold hair. The gown was caught at the waist with a wide ribbon of Alice blue. She wore sandals of silver and white.

The shadow of her life's impending end hadn't darkened the outlook of blonde and radiant Jean Harlow when the lovely young screen actress posed for this picture with Ann Marsters, Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser feature writer. Yet Jean was frank about her feeling that she ought to snatch all possible happiness before fate should deal her some unde-

ARMED SHERIFFS PATROL STEEL AREA AFTER CLASH

Youngstown, O., June 9 (INS)—Deputy sheriffs, armed with machine guns, tear gas, and other weapons, and protected by armored trucks, patrolled the streets of this strike-torn city today following the beating of 12 of their companions, three seriously in downtown Youngstown, a short distance from a Republic Steel plant gate.

"Three of my men were carried in doorways," said Sheriff Ralph Elser, who has been charged by CIO officials with interfering with their picketing of the steel mills.

The men were rescued from a menacing crowd when Sheriff Elser and a force of 40 heavily armed deputies arrived in armored trucks. Elser explained he had sent his deputies to a store for uniforms.

A crowd quickly formed. Youngstown police were notified and on arrival they found the store jammed with people who had evidently rushed the deputies. The police cleared the store, and then departed.

Some of the deputies, however, had, unknown to the police, been returned in nearby doorways. A few minutes after the police left, Sheriff Elser and his deputies arrived and rescued them. One man was arrested.

As the deputies started back for the county jail about 4 o'clock, "Everybody to the jail" went up from the crowd. A huge crowd formed in front of the jail.

Youngstown police arrived and were posted near the jail. Suddenly the sheriff's deputies, aided by eight of his deputies, called forth from the county jail and arrested two.

They had been identified by some of his deputies as among those which attacked them, said Elser. Another youth escaped in the crowd.

None of those arrested was a member of the CIO, it was reported.

The attack on the deputies followed an ultimatum by the Youngstown chief of police of the steel strikers, of whom there are approximately 30,000 in the Mahoning Valley and close to 80,000 in all scattered through seven states, to relinquish their weapons for face arrest.

The Trade Deficit

ANOTHER UNFAVORABLE BALANCE in foreign trade has been reported for the United States by the Department of Commerce in the month of April.

April is thus the FIFTH CONSECUTIVE MONTH during which American trade with other nations has been going in the WRONG DIRECTION.

The Department of Commerce and EVERYBODY ELSE knows this is a tremendously harmful thing for America.

It means we are keeping foreign industries operating at the expense of our own industries.

It means we are paying wages to foreign workers while millions of our own workers are idle.

WHAT about all the schemes and panaceas that were SUPPOSED TO RESTORE our foreign markets?

What about the reciprocal trade agreements, the preferential tariff accords and other devices that were SUPPOSED to help us SELL OUR GOODS ABROAD?

The American government went into these schemes with the wholesome hope of HELPING AMERICA.

It should now examine its program with consideration of the obvious fact that it is helping foreign countries and NOT helping America.

American farms, factories and payrolls must prosper through the production and sale of AMERICAN GOODS.

Plainly, the New Deal scheming in the field of foreign trade is NOT GETTING THAT RESULT.

Perhaps it is time to quit experimenting with panaceas, and get back to the solid American doctrine of PROTECTING American labor and industry in THEIR OWN MARKETS.

POWER STRIKE CLOSES MICHIGAN FACTORIES

Pittsburgh, ordered his secretary by phone to prepare to see him if necessary to clear strikers from the power plants. Norman Hill, the secretary, said:

"Governor Murphy is determined to get power flowing as quickly as possible. He is very angry inasmuch as the strikers were pulled at the very hour of a settlement of the strike, and because the workers violated their agreement that they would not strike again before pulling the switches."

This was the second power strike in the valley since May 19. Then the governor had stepped in, told the workers they must not strike and set the stage for the negotiations. However, union workers gathered during the night, spurred union leadership, and called the strike.

FAILS IN DARKNESS

First, the workers went to the Consumers office and shut down the plant and pulled the switches. About 5000 Consumers workers in Flint were said by the strikers to be participating in the walkout.

When switches in the Flint substation were pulled, it even cut off the electricity to the city and plunged the county and city into darkness.

All high voltage power lines leading into industrial plants were shut off. This forced shutdowns, including the Chevrolet, Buick and Fisher Body plants of General Motors. The latter plants alone affected 45,000 workers.

In midmorning, strikers agreed to turn power back on for big meat packing firms as more than $20,000 worth of perishable meat was in their refrigerators.

After completely paralyzing the city, thousands of the union pickets went to the main plant of the company at Livonia, and there, and started pulling switches.

THREATEN CLOSE

This cut off power to big industrial plants in Bay City and Saginaw. General Motors was hit again. It was forced to close plants employing 25,000 at Livonia and one plant employing 2000 at Bay City.

This brought the total of General Motors workers idle in the valley to 47,500.

In all the cities the lack of electricity put living conditions back to the Victorian era. Without power, no theaters could operate, and nearly every line of business was affected in some manner.

Large department stores found their electric cash registers would not work.

There was a rush for candles and old-fashioned oil lamps were brought down from attics.

In Flint, the white-collar workers in the Consumers office joined their overall clad power workers in the strike movement. Across the front of the Consumers office building hung the sign "Quit striking."

POLICE WAIT CALL

Trucks were drawn across all streets and boys hung up to keep switch rooms in power plants as the strikers made the strike effective.

Police in all the cities were held

MUTUAL WAS SOLVENT, SAYS SILVERMAN

Only "a difference in judgment on reserves" of the Commonwealth Mutual Liability Insurance Company forced it into bankruptcy, former Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman charged today at the State House.

On the day after Insurance Commissioner DeCelles petitioned the Commonwealth into receivership, Silverman said he was able to produce a man with $100,000 to put up if DeCelles had been willing.

"I believe that the Commonwealth was solvent and would have made money before the year (1935) was over," the witness asserted.

Silverman, who acted for the company during the receivership, was testifying before the special legislative commission probing affairs of the Commonwealth. It is the beginning of the eighth week of the hearing.

Silverman insisted that he had had no advance notice that DeCelles was about to force receivership, but on the contrary had gone away from an all-night meeting on December 12, satisfied that "everything was going to be all right."

The afternoon of the 14th, he said, he was notified that the petition for receivership had been filed. On the following day he appeared in court to protest and make his offer of the rate $100,000 backing, he declared.

Q—But wasn't it rather late then for someone to come up with $100,000?—No. It was never too late with this commission. You never knew what he was going to do.

Silverman said that it was a matter of law that the commissioner should notify a company if its reserves were getting low, but that the Commonwealth had never been warned on this score.

Q—You would have known about that, would you?—A—Yes. I knew all about the company— from beginning to end.

The witness said that he had received information after the recess of the hearing last week that gave him some understanding of DeCelles' charges of "a plot" in connection with the investigation.

Some time ago, Silverman said he happened to be in the Parker House, lunch and a member of a special commission and a legislative agent for an insurance company were also lunching there.

"I casually talked with one and then the other, the witness explained, and while it was all a plot, there was absolutely no justification for it. He added that it must be ended by daylight, and the news leaked at about $75,000.

That like the charges that witnesses for this hearing were rehearsed, he declared.

Blast Starts $75,000 Fire

Portland, June 9 (INS)—An exploding paint-spraying gun today started a general alarm fire in the center-old Walter Govey furniture company, in the heart of the business district, and the news leaked at about $75,000.

160,000 Hit by Strike

Cut Off of Power Effects Whole City

Flint, Mich., June 9 (INS)—Here are a few of the things which happened today when power in an American city of 160,000 was cut off by strikers:

All factories here were forced to shut down, throwing between 45,000 and 50,000 men out of work.

Elevators in apartments and office buildings, including the 16-story structure, were stuck between floors. Radio station WJZP was silenced.

All night restaurants had to serve patrons by lantern and candlelight. The police radio was put out of commission for a time.

The city and county jails were plunged into darkness. More than $20,000 worth of perishable meat and produce was spoiling as electric refrigerators stopped.

With no fresh meat or produce the city may go on canned food if the strike is prolonged.

Electric sweepers, garbage washers, but on the contrary had gone away from an all-night meeting on December 12, satisfied that "everything was going to be all right."

PONTIFF AGAIN SEES MENACE IN NAZI ERA

CHATEAU, GANDOLF, Italy, June 9 (AP)—Pope Pius told a group of Bavarian pilgrims today that conditions in Nazi Germany were "so grave" as to threaten the Catholic Church.

"It is a consolation to us," he told the pilgrims, "that we are able to keep with you and to console you as a father consoles his children."

"We always have done what is possible to alleviate these great sufferings. We shall continue to do so, on matter what is said of us."

In conclusion, the Holy Father told the pilgrims to remember that "only the way of God and the faith can give you happiness." He promised to pray for "you and your people, without cease."

His words served to dispel persistent but unfounded reports that the Vatican, because of repression by the Italian government, would moderate its attitude toward Germany.

Protest and lay brothers have been placed on trial on "immorality" charges.

Pope Pius and Nazi Germany have an "understanding" on international matters.

Hitler Paper Asks Pope To Come to Germany

Berlin, June 9 (AP)—The official organ of Father Adolf Hitler, the "Völkischer Beobachter," asked Pope Pius to come to Germany and find out "the truth" about the Nazi government.

Schwartzkopf, secretary of the German League of Nations, told the paper that the Pope's visit would be a "great event."

The paper invited the Pope to come to Germany "and convince himself with his own eyes on conditions in Germany and the world."

The editor, however, told the Pope that the truth was "not in Germany, but in the world."

The editor was moving to ward a showdown with a rapidly changing universal world.

Observers recalled that only four years ago Catholics were regarded as safeguarding the rights of the Church.

Postman Guilty Of Burning Mail

New York, June 9 (INS)—Convicted of burning mail in an attempt to deliver it, Henry M. Briggs, 56, a postal carrier, today awaited sentence, possibly five years each on two counts.

In a signed confession, Briggs admitted he burned the mail, but denied it contained first-class letters. He blamed injury trouble and said he was a postman for 24 years.

LAUGHING DUKE AND WALLY TOASTED BY PEASANTS

Just to prove that they can take a joke, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, photographed just after their wedding, are shown giggling as they walk down the steps leading to the main hall of the Chateau de Candé. We'll let you in on the secret: they are laughing at a joke told by a newspaperman—probably the most distinguished laugh he ever got or will get. They are accompanied by Major Metcalfe, their best man.

Soviet Ousts 5 Military Chiefs

Moscow, June 9 (INS)—Four members of the Soviet Union's highest military commanders—men who risked their lives as Bolshevik fighters before the fall of the Czar—were stripped of all authority or dismissed from post today.

U. S. SCIENTISTS GET RARE ECLIPSE PHOTOS

Washington, June 8 (AP)—Thirty long-exposed eclipse photographs taken by astronomers in the South Pacific marked their delicate instruments.

The expedition of the United States Navy and the National Geographic Society, leaving camp on Canton Island, and in a radio broadcast to its Washington sponsors that the 400-mile journey to record yesterday's total eclipse was a rare success.

"We had a glorious day," said Dr. S. A. Mitchell, University of Virginia, observatory director, leader of the expedition.

The scientific study will not end, however, until after months of painstaking research into the details of photographs which the 18 men shipped during the 210 hours of journey. It was the

Dr. Paul A. McElroy, director of the Georgetown University observatory, reported that his photographs showed exceptional detail. He advised Washington scientists to "be glad in your hearts and rejoice."

A New Zealand party camped near the Americans on Canton Island. In the open sea, 200 miles eastward, astronomers of Franklin Institute of Philadelphia and Princeton University viewed the eclipse from a freighter near the point of maximum duration.

Major Albert W. Stevens, American army aviator, observed the eclipse from a biplane near the Museum of Natural History as he soared 2500 feet above Petus mountains.

MORE DENTISTS ARMY NEED

Washington, June 9 (INS)—House majority leader Rayburn has introduced a bill to increase the number of dentists in the Army.

Backed by the American Dental Association, the bill was introduced by Rep. Collins (D.), Mississippi, and is pending before the House military affairs committee.

Rayburn declared:

"I am impressed with the merits of this bill and I think it should be brought to the floor for consideration."

There seems to be no doubt an increase in army dentists is imperative.

Chairman Hill of the House military affairs committee has announced the bill. He said the recent increase in the enlisted strength of the army makes additional army dentists "almost mandatory" for the part of the government.

Ann Johnstone Smith Makes Her Bow at Luncheon

By BETTY ALDEN

THE FRIVOLOUS PARTIES and merry whirl of the debutante season are nowhere near as important as the serious business of getting an education in Ann Johnstone Smith, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley W. Smith of Bay State road. . . . Though Ann is the official list of this season's debuts she is not having any large ball or presentation . . . but is making her social bow at a small, informal luncheon this afternoon given by Miss Aida Goodwin who came out last winter. . . .

In the interim between her graduation from the Winsor school and entering college, Miss Smith will spend next winter in Paris to continue her study of music. . . .

Today's luncheon takes place at the summer home of Miss Goodwin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sprague Goodwin in Hamilton. . . . The guest of honor is wearing a silk jersey dress of Indian print in blue and yellow, with a white hat and slippers. . . . Among the girls invited to meet her at Miss Goodwin's are Cynthia Houston, who will be guest of honor at a luncheon at the Country Club, June 15, Olivia Ames, who will keep the conversational ball rolling with her observations about the Coronation events also viewed in London. . . .

Other guests include Emily Young, Faith Conant, Angela Lang and Jean Cullen. . . . A number of girls who came out last year have also been invited. . . . and these include Peggy Parker, Nancy Cochrane, Lauretta Brooks and Katharine Newbold. . . .

Future Bride to Be Honored

CATHERINE BUFF will not have time for the proverbial "last minute shopping" for her trousseau, according to the schedule of parties for the last few days preceding her marriage to Robert Walter Scott of Chestnut street. . . . The wedding takes place at Leslie Lindsey a week from Saturday at noon. . . . and right up till the curfew sounds Friday night Cathie and Bob will be on the go. . . . The fun begins this Sunday with a beach picnic at Wynn, given by the John C. Kileys. . . . and after that there's a late tea given by Sally Scudder on Tuesday. . . . Gimmy Richmond's luncheon at the Country Club Wednesday. . . . A dinner dance at the Copley Plaza Wednesday evening given by Barbara Fulton, a former classmate of the bride-to-be at Sarah Lawrence College. . . . On Thursday, the 17th, Mrs. Buff is treating the bridesmaids to dinner while the ushers toast the bridegroom at his bachelor dinner, and Friday's program includes a luncheon on the Sheraton roof at which Mrs. Henry J. Burn (Lena Buff) will be hostess, and a dinner dance, following the wedding rehearsal, to be held at the Buff's Beacon street residence. . . .

Newlyweds at Harvard Exercises

AS PART OF THEIR wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Latham of New York are coming to Boston to attend the Class Day exercises at Harvard. . . . where their particular interest will be in seeing the bride's brother marching with his senior classmates in the colorful parade to the stadium. . . . The bride is the former Natalie Scarritt Wales, daughter of Nathaniel Brackett Wales of Boston and of Mrs. Charles E. Greenough of New York. . . . Her brother, Nathaniel Wales, Jr., is a member of this year's graduating class at Harvard. . . . they are grandchildren of Mrs. William Russell Scarritt of Commonwealth avenue. . . .

The visit here of the bride and groom will be a particularly pleasant occasion. . . . and Betty Van Antwerp who were presented to New York society at a large luncheon at the Colony Club last winter given by Mrs. Latham. . . . The twins and their mother, Mrs. George Van Antwerp, who is related to Mrs. Latham, are planning to return to give a dinner party at their Salem home sometime during the Lathams' stay here.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE :- By Beatrice Fairfax

Clever Young Woman Tells Sure Way to Reform The Date-Breaker

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Say what you will, newspapers are the place to get some of the ages boiled to capsule size.

Lines at the bottom of a column gave some advice the other day to a girl who had brought home a young man, with some pretty bad charges.

"I asked the girl," said the man, when she showed him, when she showed any indication of character. He said he belonged to a certain aristocracy, and was a date-breaker.

"I was a date-breaker," she said, "and I was a date-breaker."

"I was a date-breaker," she said, "and I was a date-breaker."

"I was a date-breaker," she said, "and I was a date-breaker."

A Skin Tonic That Is a Summer Delight

Soothing Non-Alcoholic Lotion Is Ideal Warm Weather Freshener

By ARLINE GOULD

IT isn't necessary to be past the freshness-of-youth stage . . . or one of sentiment, either . . . to appreciate the goodness of an all-around, soothing astringent.

You can be only twenty-one, with the most fragile, fairy-like complexion in all the world and still work up a fine bit of enthusiasm for a preparation that makes your face feel as though it were being washed with dew.

All too often astringents have become associated with age and withered lines and coarse, oily skin.

For that reason they have been relegated to the limbo of forgotten things, where in reality they are a vast capital piece of their own in today's hectic scheme of things.

A tonic astringent that does very special things for the face in the way of keeping it radiant, fresh and glowing, particularly during hot weather when the heat of skin goes berserk.

It is the only affair of its kind that contains no alcohol at all and yet does an efficacious job of refining pores and achieving a little girl's freshness.

Many women would seriously consider the use of a soothing lotion or astringent after a cleansing with their favorite soap, but for the fact that this effort is accomplished so nicely by working up an apricot of the kind.

Being non-alcoholic, this tonic cannot possibly dry the skin and cause any unpleasant "burning" or "stinging" effect, which is a fact that is strongly recommended for extremely sensitive skins and possesses rare healing properties.

And for those whose complexion seems to look only rather than dewy, it is at what the medico ordered. Keep a bottle of it on your dressing-table and use it freely after every facial cleansing.

It will give your skin the same delightful sensation as an ice-cream, and at a very minimum of trouble. It is exclusive with one store in town.

To learn the name of this tonic astringent for all types of skins, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000 or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Strawberry Preserves Canning Season Is In Full Swing

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMBX

TWO weeks ago today we saw a wagonload of watermelons on the street. Right away we began to think of watermelon pickles and preserves. Then we remembered that we had not taken care of the fruit at hand.

Ripe, red strawberries! Their fragrance fills the air. When we see rows of baskets filled with these bright, red berries and catch their perfume, our first thought is always of strawberries and cream.

My memory always drifts to supper in the country during the strawberry season. A large glass bowl—almost as large as a punch bowl—was always filled with strawberries for the evening meal.

Bread still warm from the oven and butter freshly churned in the morning accompanied the berries. At the feast that we forget eating muscles caused by holding in the fruit.

Put up a few extra glasses or jars to give to friends when the berries are in season. We got a paragraph from this letter.

"Just in case you're thinking of making some jelly of your own this year, I'm attaching a packet of attractive little jars to the latest fashion. When the jars are in, fasten the paper 'bonnet' over the glass with the rubber band and there you are!"

We suggest these jars in place of the tin ones that get so dingy from year to year. But probably the main reason why we like them is just because they are pretty.

Would you like some of these jars? We'll be glad to tell you how and where you may secure a full dozen of these paper covers and a dozen rubber bands.

Merely call the Martha Lee Department or drop a note, enclosing a recent stamp to Martha Lee, the Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass.

The Bureau of Home Economics suggests three different processes for preserving strawberries. Heat is the arch enemy of color and flavor in strawberries; so preserving methods use the minimum of cooking. For all methods 8 pounds of prepared fruit at one time is about the maximum for best results.

METHOD 1 Combine one pound of sugar with each pound of berries, and combine the two in alternate layers, then let them stand 8 to 10 hours before cooking. No water should be added, as the sugar draws the liquid out of the fruit. As soon as they are ready boil them rapidly 15 or 20 minutes or until the syrup is rather thick. You'll need to stir it occasionally but carefully so as not to break the berries.

METHOD 2 2 1/2 cups small berries for juice to pour over the fruit. Crush three small berries and cook them about 3 minutes, straining constantly. Strain. For each pound of the big berries take 1 cup of the juice and 1 point of sugar. Heat the sugar and the juice slowly until the sugar dissolves, then drop the large berries into the syrup and simmer 3 to 5 minutes.

Then boil rapidly 10 to 15 minutes or until the fruit is somewhat clear. Remove the syrup and let the preserves stand overnight. The next morning boil the preserves for two hours in a large pot. Then hold the syrup rapidly until it is fairly thick, pour over the berries, and seal.

METHOD 3 Method 3 can preserve can't be satisfactorily used unless the sunbake is hot enough to cause rapid evaporation. For each pound of choice berries take 1 pound sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Boil the preserves for two hours in a large pot. Then hold the syrup rapidly until it is fairly thick, pour over the berries, and seal.

METHOD 4 Method 4 can preserve can't be satisfactorily used unless the sunbake is hot enough to cause rapid evaporation. For each pound of choice berries take 1 pound sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Boil the preserves for two hours in a large pot. Then hold the syrup rapidly until it is fairly thick, pour over the berries, and seal.

METHOD 5 Method 5 can preserve can't be satisfactorily used unless the sunbake is hot enough to cause rapid evaporation. For each pound of choice berries take 1 pound sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Boil the preserves for two hours in a large pot. Then hold the syrup rapidly until it is fairly thick, pour over the berries, and seal.

METHOD 6 Method 6 can preserve can't be satisfactorily used unless the sunbake is hot enough to cause rapid evaporation. For each pound of choice berries take 1 pound sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice. Boil the preserves for two hours in a large pot. Then hold the syrup rapidly until it is fairly thick, pour over the berries, and seal.

COLLEGIATE TINGE TO HEARST TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Princeton Boys Eager for Battle

Sons of Old Nassau today rally to the Hearst Grand National tennis championships, already well backed with entries from Harvard, Yale and other New England collegiate rivals.

Two former members of Princeton's varsity tennis team, James S. Goodwin and R. L. Fitzgerald of Jamaica Plain, became identified with the New England championship play which opens at Harvard's Soldiers Field courts on Saturday, June 26.

Goodwin was for three years on the Tigers' varsity (1933-34-35), in two of which years he was undefeated. With Fitzgerald he won the doubles championship of the famous Princeton Loring-Greenough Club.

Not to be outdone by the Princeton boys, the undisciplined, two-aided sons of Old Nassau, heretofore without any entries in singles and doubles with high hopes of further proving Princeton's superiority over its traditional rival.

But aside from all personal motives, we sincerely feel that the Hearst tournament is going to prove a grand boost to tennis in this region and we wish you the best of luck in it.

Stroke Which Aided Him Win Title

Vines Says to Hit Ball After Crest of Bound

Also Talks On Court Position

By ELLSWORTH VINES

Court position is oftentimes a matter that each individual must decide for himself. However, most authorities and players agree that there are certain standardized places to play while receiving your opponent's ball, or when delivering your own service.

In receiving your opponent's service, a player should stand with his feet well apart, his knees slightly bent, and his arms extended forward, ready to receive the ball.

AVOID NO MAN'S LAND
No man's land is the area between the baseline and the service line. It is a dangerous place to stand because you are not in a position to hit the ball effectively.

After every point, a player should move back to the baseline and be ready to receive the next shot. This is especially true if you are the receiver.

Stay out of No Man's Land
That space between the baseline and the service line is a dangerous place to stand. It is a place where you are not in a position to hit the ball effectively.

Playing the ball on the rise is a good idea. It gives you more time to react to the ball and to choose your shot. It also gives you more control over the ball.

COURT COULD DO IT
If you are a player, it is best to be in the long run to take the ball on the rise. This gives you more time to react to the ball and to choose your shot. It also gives you more control over the ball.

MORAN In Somerville ADIEU

ATHLETIC ACE GRADUATES

Somerville High's Coach Charles A. Dickerman, will be doing some tall mourning to night when his three-sport star of the last three years, Frank "Pots" Moran, bids farewell by way of graduation.

During his many years of mentoring at Somerville High, Dickerman never handed a more versatile athlete than Moran who has won All-Somerville honors in basketball and football and is rated as better than any other basketball performer.

It was not the fact that Moran was a three-sport star that made him a favorite of the coaches. It was his attitude and his willingness to do whatever it took to win that made him a favorite of the coaches.

POLO IN NEW YORK

ERRORS UPSET "KING KARL"

Polo Grounds, N. Y., June 9 (INS)—Thirty thousand fans, with more arriving by the hundreds momentarily, were gathered today for the second battle of broken heads (possibly) between the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals, with the ace pitchers, Carl Hubbell and Dizzy Dean scheduled to meet in the opening game of the double header.

The same pair was the pitching principals in the first battle of broken heads at St. Louis a few weeks ago, when both teams wound up in a draw after the Giants' ace, Dean, had used the "bean ball."

The giants either did not, or they did with the best of them, but they did not pitch the bean ball today. The ace pitcher, Carl Hubbell, in right hands against the Cardinals' ace, Dizzy Dean, in left hands, was the first to pitch the bean ball today. STAN'S ENTRANCE. Frick denied this during the Cardinals' workout but, when asked what game Dean would work, he said it would be against Hubbell. The latter already had admitted that he was selected to pitch the opening game and confirmed this by taking his place in batting practice.

"I made up my mind that Dean will face Hubbell," Frick declared. "We're going to settle this today."

3 America Cup Yachts Meet Today

Newport, R. I., June 9 (AP)—The committee entrusted with supervision of a defender of the America's cup sent all three candidates to the line in a group today in the concluding race of the opening trial series.

The result of a three-cornered sailing contest usually is not very conclusive and frequently quite misleading. As a rule, two of the three are natural antagonists and they dispute the entire course while the third, an occasional little opposition to a somewhat empty victory.

The next day, the first living Thaler, then Richard Rosenwald, and now James, is being depicted as the man who was to bring the great fortune of gold and silver to the city. But if her death was prevented, the three were Jean, Rose Alexander and Laid Doyle, all portrayed by the same actress. The rule of three. And also there is the alleged fact that the fortune teller who prophesied the death. John L. Lewis' Attack ON NEW WAGE-HOUR BILL Eyed by Economist

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, June 9.—When a labor leader bites a bill brought in by the New Deal administration on behalf of labor—well, that is news.

John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization, has done just that. He has attacked the new bill on wages and hours in a most sweeping and effective manner. There is further news value in the fact that Mr. Lewis agrees with Mr. Green in this, and, above all, in the starting fact that he agrees with business leaders, practically all of whom would make the same criticism of the bill.

Of more practical importance is the fact that Mr. Lewis' stand makes it quite probable that the bill will either be amended in important respects, or it will not pass.

Back of that, lies the possibility of a widening breach between Messrs. Roosevelt and Lewis. This bill was the subject of a special commendatory message from the President. It was drawn by his bright young men, and defended by the assistant Attorney-General. It embraces the whole New Deal philosophy, and is designed to transmit the germ of the "national recovery administration." Thus the Lewis attack seems significant.

Lewis argues for one general minimum wage, below which no American citizen shall be allowed to work for a private employer. But in main point it is the provision in the bill for fixing "reasonable" or "fair" wages above the general minimum, which he has attacked.

As I pointed out over a week ago, this measure enables the government to fix wages by providing for numerous "minimum wages" for different trades and localities, and for "differentials" above the minima.

What does the Lewis objection mean? It means that the leaders of organized labor object to government control. They object to submitting to the discretionary power of a presidential "board" authorized to fix "fair wages."

Incidentally, it should be noted that while the new bill authorizes collective bargaining, it does not specifically confirm labor's power to strike.

As usual, when government control is brought close home to industry, the industrial rebels. It will always be so. Listen to what Lewis said: "Frankly, I would not want this bill to empower a board to investigate the contracts entered into by the United Mine Workers."

He is right. This "wages and hours bill" contains five different layers of government power, and it should be ripped open and made consistent. These layers are:

- (1) Power over child labor and sweat shop labor.
- (2) Power to set a general minimum wage.
- (3) Power to set a general maximum wage.
- (4) Power delegated to a board to regulate all wages at discretion.
- (5) Power to the President to dominate the board.

Beginning with the last, these powers should be denied, back to the third.

If there is to be another alphabetical bureau manned by any other regiment of government clerks, it should at least be non-partisan and independent of executive domination. The President should not name the chairman at will. There should be no quorum of only two members, etc.

But above all, we don't want any more government bureaus trying to tell us what our demands and our supplies must be, and running up our public debt. In this, we can all agree with Mr. Lewis.

In conclusion, it is to be noted that as Lewis has gained power (with the government's aid), he has lost enthusiasm for government control. It may be that his organization has no political whip hand that there is something to be said in favor of increased responsibility to the public. It may be that the reason why Lewis now opposes government power control is that he foresees the day when such control would be used to limit both his economic and his political power.

RECAPITALIZATION

Wheeling Steel Announces Plan

New York, June 9 (AP)—A recapitalization plan designed to wipe out back dividends on the 6 per cent preferred stock and provide funds for other corporate purposes was announced today following a special meeting of directors of Wheeling Steel Corp.

A special meeting of stockholders has been called for July 14 to set on the plan which provides for the creation of a new 25 cent cumulative convertible preferred stock entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of $4 a share a year.

The authorized common shares would be increased from 500,000 to 1,200,000 and one of the new preferred shares plus one-half share of common would be given to each present holder of one share of the old preferred.

The plan further contemplated will carry the right of conversion into common during the next 10 years on a sliding scale downward from 10 to 15 cents.

Roebuck to Erect
Big Detroit Store

Sears, Roebuck & Co. has acquired about 25,000 square feet of space in Highland Park district, Detroit, across from the Ford plant, where it will erect a large department store.

The new unit is expected to be completed early next spring and will carry the company's 25 cents line of retail merchandise, including new 40-cent items.

The store will be one of the largest in the entire Sears organization.

London, June 9 (AP)—Bar silver price fell 1/16 today at 20 1/2. Silver price equivalent to 47.0 cents.

POWER Output Off in WEEK

NEW ENGLAND GAINS 54.1 P. C.

New York, June 9 (AP)—Production of electricity in the New England area for the week ended June 5 was 2,131,092,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

This was a decrease of 3.5 per cent from the previous week's figure of 2,205,713,000 kilowatt hours, but an increase of 10.9 per cent over the same week last year.

The decrease, which was seasonal, left the Associated Press index of power production, with 1929-30 taken as 100, and adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend unchanged at 115.4 a year ago it stood at 115.4.

The range for recent years follows:
1927 108.3 1928 104.3 1929 103.7 1930 104.3 1931 105.7 1932 107.9 1933 109.3 1934 109.3 1935 109.3 1936 109.3 1937 109.3

The institute report showed the following percentage increase in power production by region:
New England 54.1, Middle Atlantic 10.8, South Atlantic 10.8, West 10.8, Mountain 10.8, Pacific 10.8, Southern States 10.8, Rocky Mountain 10.8, Pacific Coast 10.8.

Whiskey Surplus at Peak

New York, June 9 (AP)—The whiskey surplus in the New York member bank statement has reached a peak of 468,000 gallons. During the month of May, the surplus was 468,000 gallons, the highest since 1931.

Whiskey producers claim that they are holding up their surplus in order to "age" the supply. However, early this year officials of the Federal Alcohol Administration said it was known that while most in the industry do not regard the large quantity of surplus as approaching the danger point, the administration has nevertheless been watching the situation "very closely."

In announcing the latest figures covering stocks in bonded warehouses, it has been indicated by officials that there is no doubt that the whiskey surplus is meeting annual consumption demand.

STEEL Rate at 78 P. C.

GAINS OVER LAST WEEK

New York, June 9 (AP)—Market conditions in the steel industry show "surprisingly little change" despite strikes at plants of three major producers, "Iron Age" said today in its weekly review.

The aggregate volume of output has increased at some unaffected plants, bringing the estimated average for the country to 78 per cent, a slight rise over last week, the trade journal said.

"Only a negligible amount of business has been affected from strike-affected companies to those that are operating," the review stated, "indicating consumers have ample stocks of steel."

Many Devices Used SAYS MORGENTHAU, JR., in Tax Avoidance

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUCKESER

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

New York, June 9.—The current hullabaloo about tax avoidance and tax evasion is somewhat unrealistic. It drags a red herring across the scene, and obscures the real need at this stage of recovery for a substantial tapering off of government expenditures.

The harassed and berated taxpayers have a right to know whether they are to be permanently assessed to maintain "bread and circuses."

Of course, there have been changes in the tax laws, but more than loopholes are involved.

When government spends up to 20 per cent of the national income, taxation inevitably is reflected in the price of goods and the legitimate decisions of business men.

Tax avoidance—legal tax avoidance—has been used for years by the wealthy to avoid the payment of taxes.

The tax avoidance industry has grown into a vast business, which themselves produce something from raw materials to finished products.

It may be wickered for the business of the tax avoidance industry, which is now being destroyed by the tax laws. Yet the tax avoidance industry is still a business, and it is still a business.

Whiskey producers claim that they are holding up their surplus in order to "age" the supply. However, early this year officials of the Federal Alcohol Administration said it was known that while most in the industry do not regard the large quantity of surplus as approaching the danger point, the administration has nevertheless been watching the situation "very closely."

In announcing the latest figures covering stocks in bonded warehouses, it has been indicated by officials that there is no doubt that the whiskey surplus is meeting annual consumption demand.

Whiskey Surplus at Peak

Whiskey Surplus at Peak

New York, June 9 (AP)—The whiskey surplus in the New York member bank statement has reached a peak of 468,000 gallons. During the month of May, the surplus was 468,000 gallons, the highest since 1931.

Whiskey producers claim that they are holding up their surplus in order to "age" the supply. However, early this year officials of the Federal Alcohol Administration said it was known that while most in the industry do not regard the large quantity of surplus as approaching the danger point, the administration has nevertheless been watching the situation "very closely."
